

MICHAEL ALAN JONES

Michael (Mick) Jones we believe came from Tutbury.

During the 1960's or 1970's he emigrated to Rhodesia and at some point married Anne, probably, an English lady and had a daughter & possibly a son.

In 1979 he was working in Bulawayo as a boiler fitter. This might have been his trade when living in the UK.

Killed in Action
6 September 1979

He was a territorial in the Rhodesian Army Engineers and died whilst on active service with them. It's also a possibility that he may have been an Engineer in the British Army at some point before he emigrated.

A group of Rhodesian Army veterans are anxious to make contact with Michael's next of kin, or any extended family member, to inform them of their recent discovery in Mozambique of the burial place of him and his 16 colleagues who died when the Puma helicopter, in which they were flying was shot down.

The veterans hope that this discovery and the knowledge that they are planning to erect memorials at the crash site, will help to bring a closure on this very tragic event when Michael and his 16 brave colleagues were killed.

If anyone has any knowledge of the whereabouts of his family members or any information that might help to find them, then please contact Derry Freeman who is acting as the UK liaison in this matter, for the Puma 164 Association.
